As the virus penetrated the nation, New York City would become the initial COVID hotspot and would soon find itself in lockdown. ACC was deemed an “essential service” by the city and the state, and we heeded the call to service and worked tirelessly to ensure that the pandemic would not destroy the human animal bond that is at the core of our mission to end animal homelessness in NYC.

The pandemic presented challenges of all sorts that required rethinking how we can best serve NYC’s animal welfare and sheltering needs. Much of what we learned—and continue to learn—about our clients and our community during the pandemic will serve to inform how we move closer to fulfilling our mission.

When we put out a call for foster homes to help us prepare for a potential influx of animals from COVID-19-impacted homes, 5,000 people signed up! In the first week, we had moved 250 pets into foster homes. Our care centers, normally with a population exceeding 600 animals, had 150 across all three locations. As work-from-home became the norm we were able to reach a whole new segment of potential fosters and adopters. ACC’s foster program gained national attention as the housebound world found solace in pet companionship.

Like many other shelters across the nation, ACC began virtual adoptions, showcasing animals with enhanced profiles, videos and photos. Potential adopters would set up appointments to meet specific pets either in the shelter or in the foster home. Our New Hope partnership program, which places pets with medical or behavioral issues beyond our resources to solve, also expanded. We added 40 new rescue organizations to the program, growing our roster of partners to 310. In 2020 our New Hope partners pulled 6,229 animals, placing them in their local adoption programs.

Our Field Services team never paused its critical work in assisting the people and animals of our city. From rescuing animals from hoarding cases to retrieving animals left behind due to COVID hospitalizations, our Field Services officers were out in the community every day, at great personal risk during the height of the pandemic, to keep our communities safe. Without a doubt, 2020 was a year of hardship for the world, the nation, the state of New York and our beloved New York City. ACC is proud to have served NYC in its capacity as an essential workforce throughout the pandemic. We wear that designation as a badge of honor. We will look back on 2020 as the year when NYC’s homeless animals were sought out by thousands of people looking for connection and comfort and ACC was there for them.

ACC is grateful for the resilience and dedication of our staff, volunteers, partners and supporters. The collaboration that was cemented in these unprecedented times will aid our city’s animals and people for years to come.

In any given year ACC finds loving homes for thousands of animals through in-shelter adoptions and at mobile adoption events. In 2020 we shifted to appointment-based adoptions, due to social distancing requirements and to keep staff and clients safe. With the help of our incredible volunteer photographers and videographers ACC was able to showcase the animals online. They captured the heart and soul of the pets and piqued the interest of potential adopters who would then schedule a time to meet them in person. For those who were unsure of the commitment we offered a foster-to-adopt option. Having this option was so successful we have permanently incorporated it into our placement program!

New Hope Partnership
ACC wasn’t the only one effected by the pandemic. Our New Hope partners too found themselves in unchartered waters. Still, we were able to add 40 new organizations to the program, expanding our base to over 350 partners! Many of our partners were able to temporarily take in pets directly from the public, which also reduced the number of pets needing to enter the shelter system. Having a wide network of animal welfare organizations, each with their own specialty, is crucial for any city’s lifesaving efforts.

Together, with our partners, ACC has maintained a placement rate over 90% for the past four years!
Get Involved

Donate Financially
When you give to ACC, you provide much needed funds for programs outside the scope of our contract. These programs include our pet food pantry, community vaccine clinics, behavior training, humane education for kids and more.

Leave a Legacy
Your estate gift can change the lives of generations to come. A bequest in your will or beneficiary designation in estate plans can change the lives of generations of animals to come. This charitable planning enables donors to make substantial gifts and create a legacy of compassion.

Donate Stock
When you donate stock, you’ll not only make a huge impact on the lives of homeless and abandoned animals, but you’ll avoid paying costly capital gains tax as well. Our trained staff is ready to help you through the process.

Donate Goods
We often need things like bedding, towels, leashes and other items to keep our shelter animals comfortable. Your gently used linens and other household goods can be used every day in our shelters. We also have an Amazon wish list for items we continuously need throughout the year.
